

COURT ORDERS DISSOLUTION OF THREAT TRUST

TRENTON, N. J., June 2.—A decree dissolving the threat trust was handed down today by Judge Hughes. The decree, which was made against the American Threat Company and affiliated concerns, is the result of several months' effort on the part of the government to break up the alleged monopoly.

The court ruled that the American Threat Company, the English Sewing Cotton Company, Ltd., the Wool Cotton Company, J. & P. Co. Ltd., the Clarke Thread Company, the Clark Mill Spool Cotton Company, James Chadwick & Son, the Jones Bros., the Jones & Williams Cloth, Walker & Co., Robert H. Robinson, James Valentine and G. H. Allen were all parties to the conspiracy in restraint of trade and in violation of the Sherman act.

All of the defendants are prohibited from holding, acquiring or investing in any of the capital stock or other securities of the other companies.

J. & P. Co. Ltd. are ordered before January 1, 1915, to discontinue any interest they may now have in the capital stock of the other companies of the American Threat Company, Ltd.

Alled, Robinson, who had been jumped into the pond from the abutment of the bridge. He was pulled from the water, unconscious, but soon revived.

PERMITS TO CHANGE IMMIGRATION STATION SITE

Opposition has developed to the building of the proposed new immigration station near Jeffries Point, East Boston. The government's plans and specifications have reached Boston, and bids are due before the end of the month, but the immigration officials, from Collector of the Port Billings down, are opposed to the East Boston location.

The explanation is that the port has developed since the time, years ago, when this immigration station was first planned. Then much of the steamship business was done in East Boston. Now the White Star and Hamburg-American docks are in South Boston, and the Jeffries Point site is too remote.

A movement has developed to have the station established on the Commonwealth Pier, South Boston, and to drop the building project altogether. Chairman Hancock of the Board of Port Directors was asked today: "How would you look on a proposal to establish immigration quarters on the Commonwealth Pier?" He replied: "We would be glad to furnish the government what space it needs. The acreage of the pier is nearly half that of Boston Common, and it would be strange if we could not find single rooms to accommodate an immigration station. At present the existing immigration quarters are larger than those at Ellis Island in New York, and there is no room for detention quarters, offices and a hospital."

French Cabinet Resigns in a Body

PARIS, June 2.—Premier Gaston Doumergue and his colleagues of the French Cabinet went to the Palace of the Elisee today and resigned collectively to President Poincaré. It was understood that one of the prominent politicians would be requested in the course of the day to undertake the formation of a new Cabinet. The new government in the cabinet of the Chamber that René Viviani, now Minister of Public Instruction, would be one of the first approached.

Lotteries Thriving FOREIGNERS WILD Woman Wins $1,000

NEW YORK, June 2.—The country is flooded with lottery tickets today. $10,000 was distributed in prizes last month in New York, and the foreign element is wildly excited over the fact that an investment of $1 may win the grand prize of $50,000.

Two lotteries are working the game—one a Hungarian concern, the other a German.

Half the barber shops, billiard rooms and saloons in the foreign settlements are active agents for the companies, and it is estimated that not less than $100,000 a month is being expended for tickets.

The largest prize awarded here last month was for $1,000, and was won by a woman who has been playing the lottery ten years.

Woman Chains Self to King's Palace

LONDON, June 2.—Another militant suffragette demonstration was staged outside the gates of Buckingham Palace today, but neither King nor Queen were seen. A woman chained herself to the gates while the police were out looking and then a companion began waving flags and shouting "Votes for women." Soon a large crowd collected, but the police were not looking and broke the chains and carried both women off to jail.

Boy in Court for Seventeenth Time

For the seventeenth time within a year, Alfred Barrett, thirteen, who was charged with the murder of a boy, was brought to court today at No. 1148 Dorchester avenue, Dorchester, was arraigned today in the South Boston Police Court. Though convicted in the lower court at almost every instance, young Barrett has never served a day in jail or paid a fine, for the Superior Court has in each case reversed the decision on the ground that the charges were too trivial or the evidence insufficient. Barrett was convicted today of assaulting Helen Swarwick. Judge Fallon sentenced him to one month on such charges. He appeared and was held in $500.

Huntington School Field Day Thursday

The Huntington School will hold its annual field day at Riverside Recreation Grounds on Thursday. A day of sports consisting of track, ball, racing and a baseball game between the school team and the faculty will be held.

EX-GOV. CURTIS'S WIFE WARMS OF $25,000 BLAZE

Fire Captain M. J. Lawler was painfully injured and had a narrow escape from death in a $25,000 fire in the temporary residence of James M. Curtis at No. 111 Commonwealth street today. Mrs. Curtis still, wife of the former Governor, telephoned the alarm to the fire department.

The Curtis home was empty, the family being in Connecticut. Insulation had worn off an electric wire in the cellar, and it set ablaze the wood there. Just after daylight a maid in the field home at No. 124 Marlborough street, which backs across the alley from the Curtis home, heard a crash of breaking glass and saw flames and smoke burst from the Curtis basement.

She ran up stairs to Mrs. Curtis, crying: "There's a fire. The house is on fire. Over there." She pointed out the window. Mrs. Curtis called out saw the smoke, and calmly telephoned the fire department.

When the apparatus arrived smoke was beginning to show at the front of the house. They broke down the shutters or storm door over the front vestibule, then battered in the front door. The house was filled with smoke, but no fire was in sight.

Captain Lawler was leading his men, and charged across and laid a hose. The floor dropped beneath him. He fell through. The fire in the cellar had so weakened the flooring that a piano had fallen through, or saving a wide bed, and in the smoke Captain Lawler fell into the fire.

At about his men were after him, and he crawled back to the cellar and dragged him out. He had a badly cut hand, was partially overcome by smoke, and had a narrow escape from death in the flames.

The fire broke up through the first floor, and a collection of furniture was badly damaged. The value of these furnishings is known only in the Curtis family, who will return to town at once.

RENEW SEARCH FOR CLARKE ON SECRET CLEW

LOS ANGELES, Cal., June 2.—Secret information is believed to have been received by Mrs. F. Lewis Clarke, wife of the millionaire and former commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club at Marblehead, Mass., who disappeared from Santa Barbara several months ago, which has strengthened her conviction that he is alive and will yet return to his home in England.

Clarke was last seen in Santa Barbara, walking toward the strand, where his hat was found on the day following. The theory of suicide was suggested, but since the arrest of a private detective the police have been searching for him. Clarke is under way today, Mrs. Clarke's secretary said.

"Mrs. Clarke clings to the idea that her husband is away ill and that he will some day return to his home. She has not accepted the theory that he is dead."

Brazilians Fight Over Locks of Hair as T.R. Sees Barber

NEW YORK, June 2.—Dr. L. E. Benson of Los Angeles, who was at Corumbá when Roosevelt came in from his Brazilian expedition, is telling how the natives fought for locks of the colonel's hair. It amazed the natives to see the distinguished visitor being sheared with the same clippers and scissors anybody in the village could have applied to himself by the lone barber.

Immediately the colonel had quit the chair, the crowd closed in and wedged part of itself in through the doorway, where the fortunate fell to picking up the hair clipped from the colonel's head. These less fortunate quarreled when the supply gave out.

1,000 STRIKERS BACK AT WORK IN WAKEFIELD

One thousand striking employees at the Haywood Brothers & Wakefield Hattin Company's plant in Wakefield went back to work today as the result of a settlement effected through the State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration.

The group of union strikers assembled at the A. F. of L. headquarters at 636. Their officers spoke briefly, advising them how to conduct themselves; and then, two by two, they marched down the street and entered the factory. The L. W. W. workers were massed outside the factory and they fell in behind the union men.

The terms of the settlement have not been made public; but it is understood proposals submitted by the company through the state board were accepted by the union men and then by the L. W. W. Both sides made concessions.

Good Morning, Have You a Tango Knee? It's Latest Malady

The tango knee has come to Boston. It seems the extensor muscles of the leg bear the burden of tangoing. Maud, matron and merrymen are liable to be affected.

"The knee joint is made to do stunts it was never intended to do," explains Dr. Miles Martin, of the Westminster. "In dancing the tango one dips deeply, and therefore brings a great strain on the extensor muscles. If this is persisted in long enough tango knee is liable to develop. Then it becomes necessary to bandage the knee and insist that the patient have complete rest."

Court Order Gives Standard Oil Billion

SAN FRANCISCO, June 2.—A withdrawal order by which William H. Taft in 1905, while President, exonerated from entry government oil lands in California, variously estimated in value at from $250,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, has been declared valid in a decision by Judge Maurice F. Taft of the United States District Court of San Francisco. The decision gives to the Standard Oil Company and the Standard Oil Company undisturbed possession.

What Cadum is Made Of

Cadum, the well-known remedy for itches and other skin troubles, is one of the very few preparations sold in drug stores that is not secret. A list of its ingredients is printed upon every box. One ingredient is oil of cade, which is produced by distilling a kind of the best things known for Eczema. Another ingredient is stearic acid, which dries up the water that forms upon sore places on the skin. Two other ingredients are petrolatum and white wax, which make a covering to protect these sore spots from the air and water. A trial box of Cadum can be secured in any drug store for 10c, but it is cheaper to buy the 50c box, as it contains nearly four times as much as the 10c box.

DELAY VERDICT IN NORWOOD'S POLICE PROBE

The charges of neglect of duty and of taking property, lodged against Patrolman Cornelius C. Murphy of Norwood, the proving more difficult of settlement than first expected, in the opinion of Norwood citizens.

They infer this from the announcement that the Norwood police who were expected to announce a decision last night, have ordered a two-day continuance in the case, with Murphy remaining under suspension, but not under arrest.

The charges against Murphy were filed by Special Officers Dennis Hayes, Jr. and John Lannehan. Hayes is first cousin of the accused man.

They charged Murphy with having taken merchandise from Michael

if Governor Walsh's Recommendations Are Adopted, New England Will Be Freed From Railroad Domination and Will Cease to Be the Helpless Victim of Wall Street Exploitation

The people of Massachusetts have good cause to congratulate themselves upon the presence of Governor Walsh at the helm during the process of readjusting our railroad status, both to the law and to the public interest.

The message which accompanied the agreement containing the terms of the proposed separation of the Boston & Maine and the New Haven shows the character of his service during the five months of arduous triplicate negotiation between the national government in the person of T. W. Gregory, special representative of the Department of Justice; Massachusetts, represented by Governor Walsh and assisted by Commissioner George W. Anderson, and the railroads, represented by President Elliott and counsel.

The Governor's message is all that could be desired. If its recommendations are adopted northern New England will see itself free from railroad and industrial provincialism and will cease to be the hapless victim of Wall Street banker exploitation. By the terms of the agreement which the Governor transmits to the Legislature, with his approval, the New Haven will immediately, upon the enactment of legislation which the Governor recommends, cease, directly or indirectly, to dominate the affairs of the Boston & Maine, which it has nearly ruined in seven years of control. It will transfer the stock of the Railroad Holding Company which it now possesses to five representative business men, headed by our former Chief Justice, Marcus F. Knowlton, who presided over our Supreme Court when it upheld the law against the aggressions of the New Haven in its attempt to seize Massachusetts trolleys and the Boston & Maine seven years ago.

The Boston Railroad Holding Company is the device by which the New Haven circumvented the law and succeeded in perfecting its control of the Boston & Maine. The Holding Company owns a majority of the stock of the Boston & Maine. Therefore, when the control of the Holding Company is surrendered by the New Haven to these five men, four of whom, including the former Chief Justice, are Massachusetts men, and one a business man of New Hampshire, the dominance of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven will immediately cease. These five men will at once exercise the power in the affairs of the Boston & Maine which the New Haven now has.

These gentlemen, called liquidators, will be charged by the terms of the agreement with certain duties in the interest both of the Boston & Maine and of the public.

First. They must sell the stock of the Boston & Maine which the Railroad Holding Company now owns within two years and a half unless, for good cause shown, the court extends the time in which the sale of this stock must be completed. Their powers therefore are strictly limited as to time. They are not allowed to sell this stock to the stockholders of the New Haven as a class or to the New Haven Railroad itself or to any person or corporation, directly or indirectly, representing the New Haven.

Second. They must reorganize the Board of Directors and the management of the Boston & Maine and see that the railroad is conducted wholly with a view to its own independent interest without regard to the New Haven Railroad and with regard only to the public welfare.

Third. They must give the minority stockholders of the Boston & Maine a voice in its management, which the minority has not had for seven years.

Fourth. They must permit the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to purchase the stock of the Boston & Maine which they are obliged to sell within two and a half years, if the Commonwealth elects so to do.

By this adjustment which the Governor recommends, the independence of the Boston & Maine Railroad will be as completely restored as if it had never been lost and, yet, the Commonwealth will have acquired certain advantages which it did not have before the Wall Street looters made their raid upon our New England enterprises. For some years before the New Haven took control, the Standard Oil and the Morgan-American Express Company interests were really dominating the Boston & Maine. Charles F. Lewis, George L. Leary, Henry M. Whitney and a few others really represented New York interests on the Boston & Maine directorate. The American Express Company owned a large block of the stock of the Boston & Maine as to give it an effective control. Former President Tuttle of the Boston & Maine was really dominated by this group of Wall Street interests. It was through their influence that the outrageous Express Company contract, by which the Boston & Maine loses over $700,000 a year, was perpetrated upon the stockholders of that unfortunate railroad. This American Express Company interest in the Boston & Maine was a constant danger to the independence of the railroad and it ultimately caused the loss of its independence by the transfer of the Express Company's stock to the New Haven.

No such situation will exist under the new adjustment recommended by Governor Walsh. The four business men who will co-operate with Chief Justice Knowlton are REALLY the representatives of the public and not of any private interest. They are charged with duties not incumbent upon the ordinary stockholder and certainly not observed by the Wall Street interests in the Boston & Maine before the New Haven took possession. To this extent, therefore, the Boston & Maine will be more independent of the New Haven and more completely New England in its control and aspirations than it has been for a great many years.

But this is not the only advantage which will accrue to the Commonwealth and to New England through the Governor's recommendations, if they are accepted.

When the law was passed establishing the Boston Railroad Holding Company, designed to legalize the unlawful control of the Boston & Maine by the New Haven, had already secretly effected, the sponsors for the law attempted to sugar-coat it by reserving to the Commonwealth a right to approve the transfer of the stock in this company. Since this company was to acquire the control of the Boston & Maine, this provision meant that the Commonwealth reserved the right to control the transference of power in the Boston & Maine. Yet, undoubtedly, at the time this law was not meant to be a mere talking point. But to their consternation the New Haven interests have recently found that they "built better than they knew," for by this provision the Commonwealth was made a necessary party to the negotiations for the severance of these two railroads, and Governor Walsh was enabled to render his very effective service, not only to the people of Massachusetts, but to New England.

Another provision in the Holding Company act which was also meant as a mere sop to the people is the provision for the purchase by the Commonwealth of the stock of the Holding Company. Under the terms of the separation between the two railroads recommended by Governor Walsh this right is enlarged and made more practical by providing that the Commonwealth need give no notice whatever of its intention to purchase the stock. The Governor further proposes to safeguard the rights of the Commonwealth by providing that the people may decide at the next election, if they wish to do so, whether or not the Commonwealth shall purchase this stock and proceed to control the Boston & Maine.

The Governor expresses no opinion at present upon the wisdom of assuming the responsibilities of such a step, but he believes that it is right for the people to vote to have a judge for themselves. The party of which he is the leader and the party which obtained the next largest number of votes in the Commonwealth and in the nation in the last election both declared in favor of the initiative and referendum, which would provide the people with the means of deciding these vital questions for themselves when their representatives fail to represent their opinions. Therefore, the Governor, as always, remains loyal to his party platform.

If the Governor's recommendations are accepted this will be the Appomattox of a great political, financial, industrial struggle which has been waged in this community for seven long, strenuous years. Interest in the conflict and in the railroad problems which it presents has spread throughout the forty-eight States of the Union and has involved the national government. Out of every great struggle which ends in victory much good beyond the mere victory itself always comes. This contest is no exception. While the victory will be found in the re-establishment of the railroad independence of New England, yet we shall have gained more than this. We have learned some important lessons.

We have learned that there is more corruption inside of a railroad than in politics. We have learned that the corruption of politics largely flows from the corrupt schemes of those who control the railroads. We have learned that men who rob honest investors and destroy business and upset the public confidence and threaten the stability of the republic are not the men who talk excitedly on the Common to the unemployed, but are the sleek gentlemen in Wall Street whose business it is to transfer from the pockets of honest business men into their own pockets money which others have earned and which they get only by theft. They are men like Morgan, who takes a train full of bishops to a church convention all as a matter of business.

The people have learned the "tricks of the trade" in railroad looting. They have learned the value of our industrial independence. They have learned to beware of the men and the newspapers who sneer at a newspaper like the BOSTON AMERICAN when fighting against some gigantic scheme of public plundering. THE BOSTON AMERICAN TOLD THE TRUTH FOR SEVEN YEARS CONCERNING THIS RAILROAD SITUATION.

MASSACHUSETTS HAS AN HONEST, COURAGEOUS, INTELLIGENT GOVERNOR IN DAVID I. WALSH.

Almansa—Grit vs. Dash

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE Battle of Almansa, fought 267 years ago, is well worthy of a place among the most notable of the battles of the world. It was a battle of the English and Dutchmen, with many thousands of Portuguese, were attacked by an overwhelming number of Frenchmen and Spaniards under the Duke of Berwick, and practically annihilated. The Portuguese, noting the hopelessness of the situation, ran away, but the Dutch and Britishers stood their ground and fought against the mighty odds till almost the last man of them were either captured or killed.

It was a great French and Spanish victory, and yet it showed the great moral courage on the part of the vanquished which were ultimately to give them the mastery of the planet.

Of this unflinching courage, of this grandest of all the forms of bravery—the bravery of the alien soldier—we read the history in the story of the rise of the Dutch Republic, the building of the German Empire, the struggle for the mastery of the North American Continent, the fight for American independence, the wonderful struggle for the preservation of the American Union, and so on, right up to the present moment.

It is so these sublime qualities, which he has ever possessed to a greater extent than any other nation, that the Teuton owns the masterful position that belongs to him today. It is on account of these qualities that in new lands, pretty nearly all the strategic points on the globe are held by him, slowly, but surely, in the moral and intellectual leadership of the human race.

There was a time, and a long time, too, when he was small and weak, but when attacked by his big and powerful neighbors he stood his ground, refused to be crushed, and finally, by his dogged grit of body and the idea of the man, and today he has the controlling word in the affairs of men on this planet.

And then he began to reach out—his murky home in South Germany to Britain and from Britain to North America, and from North America to Australia, South Africa, and the idea of the man, and today he has the controlling word in the affairs of men on this planet.

His ideas and functions are rapidly growing, and unless some sort of miracle takes place, in another hundred years he will hold the same position that he held in ancient times, the Roman Empire, the British Empire, the Berlin, Cape Town and Melbourne shall give free the laws that will rule the world.

Questions Answered

POSTAGE STAMPS
T. F. M.—It will be a waste of time for you to attempt to secure your collection of the postage stamps of the French revolution. There was no such thing as a postage stamp in those days. There was stamped postal interest as early as 1518, but it was not until 1820 that the adhesive stamp was used on letters and other mail matter.

THE WAR OF THE ROSES
H. W. L.—The "War of the Roses" was waged between the houses of York and Lancaster, and their adherents, 1455-1485. The Lancastrians chose as their emblem a red rose, while the Yorkists selected a white rose. While no great popular war broke out, the struggle indirectly did much for the cause of democracy. It is said that no fewer than twelve princes of the blood and as many as 250 of the nobility were killed. The effect upon the future political state of the country was enormous.

CROWNELL
H. P. C.—Crownell had no royal blood in his veins. The contention that such was the case failed when put to the test. The old pretence that he was a descendant of King Henry VIII. was known as a fraud and unbecomingly withdrawn. His "blood" was just plain English blood, and could in no way claim to be "royal blood."

The Boston Herald Caught Stealing News

The long, impressive and important statement by Charles S. Mellen, published in the BOSTON AMERICAN on Sunday, was made exclusively to the AMERICAN by Mr. Mellen, and was an individual effort on the part of that newspaper.

A special representative of the AMERICAN saw Mr. Mellen, spent considerable time with him, and Mr. Mellen was so much interested in his dictated statement that he carefully revised it before publication. By every rule of journalistic ethics the statement belonged exclusively to the Sunday AMERICAN.

But the one-time esteemed Boston Herald saw fit to steal a part of the Mellen statement from the columns of the Sunday AMERICAN and reproduce it in its news columns.

This would not be so important if the Boston Herald were not constantly prattling about its high ideal of journalism. Also, its droolings about fakes and fakers in journalism would seem to be in direct contrast with the Boston Herald practices the very lowest and meanest kind of news thievery.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox ON Real Love

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

LOVE is supposed to be a love-making and a love-giving creature, yet the woman who really loves in the full meaning of the word is as rare as a white blackbird.

The woman who marries for love, or who marries loving fully and absolutely, is one of one thousand of all the brides on earth.

Women marry because they are asked; because they want a home or an establishment; because they think it is time to be settled; because they fear they may be spinster; because they like the man who proposes; because they respect him; because they think he will get on in the world; because he is a "good catch."

But these reasons do not include love.

Love may include them all, or it may exclude them all.

The woman who really loves is so utterly absorbed in the emotion that she does not stop to consider the advantages or disadvantages, the benefits or dangers of marrying her lover.

She does not hold the man up to inspection to dissect or analyze him in the real man.

She wraps him about with a great shining mantle of love, and sees in him all the manly virtues of her ideal, and she is so persistently imaginative in her thoughts and feelings regarding him that she cannot see his very qualities of this ideal, and if the majority of cases causes these qualities to express themselves in the real man.

This invariably occurs with the lover of a woman who loves absolutely, unselfishly, and with an intimate manikin, instead of a man, as the recipient of her devotion.

Love is the creative power of the universe, and every woman who loves absolutely becomes a creator. All men are unacquainted with it, and the woman who loves deeply enough to enter into the divine drama of the man who loves her.

When a woman loves a man she goes to the uttermost ends of the earth with him, or she remains at home, and she is so happy that she could find in places without him.

There are some things which a woman who loves a man never does. She does not argue with him over trifles or dispute with him over serious things.

She may discuss matters, but as a discussion in the domestic drama she finds a way to change the topic.

Could packs his bow and arrows and flies precipitately to the rescue of a woman who will dispute with a man.

She does not contradict her lover or husband in public. She does not remark that he always spoils his story in the telling and proceed to interrupt him with her own version of it.

She does not just about her marriage and her life, and she does not regret it, or that she took the worst of her many others.

She does not show signs, if she really loves a man, which reflect upon him.

If a factious woman or a designing man tells her she is superior to her husband, she resents it instead of being flattered or pleased. She does not tell people how her husband neglects her or talk of his shortcomings in order to obtain sympathy.

She does not compare him with other men, and she does not say that she loves a man who DOES NOT LOVE HIM if he is going to say any of these things.

For love creates tact, bluntness, sympathy, unselfishness, and a hundred other qualities, as its spirit guards—and they always accompany it, wherever it may be led.
